

Different Types of Brow Pencils

Choosing the best eyebrow pencil can make a major impact on your overall appearance. It helps to define the brow, giving them a much more even fill, cleaner look and dramatic frame, depending on how you use them.

Even though make up has been around for years, eyebrow pencils didn't become popular until the 1900s, when Tom Lyle Williams launched the Maybelline line. The company was named after Williams' sister Mabel, who created her own eyebrow paint by mixing petroleum jelly with coal dust and ash. Eyebrow pencils since then have been made mostly of tinted wax and preservatives, but many modern formulas are also waterproof. Though waterproof brow pencils means less smudging, they are not too forgiving if you make mistakes, they also tend to contain latex which may cause some allergy issues if you have sensitive skin. Keep it cute, that is the last thing we need. So we are going to help you ladies understand the different types of brow pencils to help you choose the right one for you!

Natural Pencils

When it comes to the environmentally conscious, a product with no harmful chemicals or additives may just be a great suit for you. Well I'm pretty sure that it is. One great eco-friendly brow pencil would be the Shobha Brow Pencil. This pencil is free of parabens and artificial fragrances and uses ingredients like jojoba seed oil, beeswax and carnauba wax. Plus, it even comes in an eco-friendly box. It was also the beauty editors pick over at Marie Claire.

